“ I've been struggling with what to write. Pawpee I will forever be your pooh butt. You have taught me how to bait a hook, get the fish off without getting my hand sliced. You taught me how to gut a fish, how to ride a bike, how to cook fried potatoes. You taught me that pancakes taste best with peanut butter, and so much more. You instilled so much into me. I'll forever cherish John Wayne movies, peanut butter m&m's and our debates over which color was best, Kung Fu movies, back country roads with the windows down and music loud. I'll miss your hugs and your prickly cheeks, rubbing your belly and you telling me it's your beer baby. I'll miss you making silly faces to make everyone laugh, i'll miss watching you put together the endless toys on Christmas. I'll miss your random phone calls and even your gross spit bottles 🤢👩. I'll miss being able to sit in a room with you in silence and it being the most safe and peaceful place. I'll miss you telling me I'm your favorite, even though I know you tell all of us grands that. I'll just miss you! I know you are no longer sad, you are resting with my beautiful Nana, and that thought is what carries me. Thank you for molding me, for creating a safe space for me, for hanging on when you know we needed you. You are the strongest man I know. I love you forever and always. Love your Pooh butt. 💔😞
